

The Daily Courant.

Friday, December 6. 1706.

Paris, Nov. 26. 1706.

THE 26th of October past a new Edict was registred in Parliament, importing, that from the Beginning of this present November, the Office and Emoluments of comptrolling or verifying the Extracts to be taken from the Registers of all Births, Marriages, and Burials, shall be incorporated with the Royal Demesnes for ever. No Suit can be commenc'd, nor any Deed pass'd, relating to the Birth, Marriage, or Death, of any Person whatever, unles Extracts duly comptroll'd (specifying the Time of the Birth, Marriage, or Death, in question) be taken out of the said Office, on Pain of Nullity of the said Suit or Deed, and of a Fine.

On this Occasion a Tarif, or List of the several Rents to be paid by all Persons for the said Extracts, has been publish'd by the King's Order: 'Tis in 3 whole Sheets in Quarto, and dispos'd Alphabetically. All Ranks and Conditions of Persons, both of the Clergy and Laity, are rated distinctly and severally in this Tarif. A Specimen of it follows.

A Prince, and all others of every Degree of Nobility down to a Baron inclusive, 25 Livres.

An Archbishop, and all other dignified Clergymen down to an Abbot inclusive, 25 Livres.

A Marshal of France, and all military Officers, down to a Lieutenant-Colonel by Land, and a Captain of a Man of War by Sea, inclusive, 25 Livres.

The Officers employ'd in France, at Court, in collecting the several Revenues and Impots, and in other Services of the Government, are known to be very numerous; they are by this Tarif rated according to the Dignity or Profits of their Employments, for Example, Ministers and Secretaries of State, Presidents of Parliaments, Receivers General of the Finances and Demesnes, and others that may (for either of the foremention'd Reasons) be deem'd of the first Class in the Administration or Government, are rated at 25 Livres; and others of Inferior Employments are rated proportionably thereto at 20, 15, 12, and lower.

Apothecaries in Paris, 15 Livres, in other Cities of the first Rank, 12; in other Towns and Villages, 6. Surgeons to pay the same.

Barbers and Perriwig-makers in Paris, 10 Livres; in other Cities of the first Rank, 8; in other Towns 6.

Benefic'd Clergymen, whose Livings are under 200 Livres a Year, 6 Livres; those whose Benefices are of greater Value, 12.

Curates in Paris 12 Livres; in other Cities of the 1st and 2d Rank 6, in other Towns 3.

Domestick Servants, as Valets de Chambre, waiting Women, Cooks, and the like, in Paris and other Cities of the first Rank 3 Livres; in other Towns 1 Livre 10 Sols; in the Country 10 Sols. Livery Servants, in Paris and other Cities of the first Rank 1 Livre; in other Towns 10 Sols, in the Country 5 Sols.

Doctors in whatever Faculty or University, 12 Livres.

Day Labourers, in Cities of the first Rank, 1 Livre; in other Towns 10 Sols, in the Country 5 Sols.

Gentlemen, who are Lords of Parishes, 10 Livres; other ordinary Gentlemen, 6.

Married Women to pay according to the Quality or Condition of their Husbands.

Merchants trading in Wholesale by Sea or Land, in any Place, 12 Livres.

Shopkeepers, that sell Goods by Retail, in Paris 6 Livres; in Cities of the 1st Rank, 4; in other Towns, 2; in Villages, 1.

Traders esteem'd more Substantial, such as Drapers, Grocers, Goldsmiths, and the like, 12 Livres.

Physicians, in Paris 20 Livres; in Cities of the 1st Rank, 12; in other Towns and Villages, 6.

Priests, 2 Livres; all their Inferiors that are shaven, 1.

Soldiers, 5 Sols.

General Articles. Those who have different Titles or Qualities, shall pay according to their highest Title or Quality. Widdows, and Women living separate, shall pay according to the Quality of their Husbands. All Cities shall be reputed of the 1st Rank, in which is a Parliament or other Superior Court, or Office of Finances, as also Marseilles, Arles, Nismes, Angers, le Mans, Chartres, Arras, Valenciennes, Reims, and Troyes.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated Dec. 4.

Paris, Nov. 29. Tho' it has been talk'd a great Reform would be made at Court, nothing is yet done in it, nor is any thing heard of there but new Impots: New Edicts relating to the Finances are likewise on the Anvil, for re-establishing the King's Credit if possible. The Court reckon that the Tax upon Births, Marriages, and Burials, will bring so much in, that it may serve for a Fund to take up a considerable Sum. 'Tis said the Duke of Alva Ambassador of Spain has assur'd his Majesty, that the Grandees of Spain will never consent to the Dismembering of their Monarchy, and that thereupon Order is given for the Troops to be compleat by the 1st of March.

From the Leid. Gaz. Nov. 26. and Amst. Cour. Dec. 2.

Paris, Nov. 26. The Prince of Vaudemont and the Count de Medavi have sent the King their Project for maintaining themselves in the Mantuan, if they be furnish'd with Succours by a certain Time, but 'tis not known what Answer his Majesty has return'd to them: The King seems to set his Heart more upon the preserving of Spain now that things go well there, and to that End to be resolv'd to have a greater Army in that Kingdom than the Enemy; and 'tis said it has been propos'd in the Council to employ 60000 Men there, to act in 3 Bodies; and in Order thereto to keep but 15000 Men on the Frontier of Dauphine, and to send the rest of the Troops from thence to Spain: But 'tis not visible yet whence so many more Troops can be sent as to make up in all 60000 Men; much less can we imagine how the Court will be able to send to Sea so great a Force as they pretend, for 'tis talk'd that first a strong Squadron will be fitted out to go to the West-Indies to fetch home the Gallions, it being known that an English Squadron is gone to those Parts; and that we shall have a Fleet in the Mediterranean by the Spring, for securing Naples: 'Tis certain this cannot be done without more Money than the Court is able to furnish, in the Difficulties they at present labour under.

Paris, Dec. 3. Yesterday M. Chamillard came into this City, having appointed several Merchants to meet him, to confer about the Mint-bills which continue at a very great Discount. He had likewise order'd some Merchants of Milan, who are come hither to sollicit the Repayment of 3 Millions which they advanc'd to pay the Army in Italy, to come to him Yesterday, to satisfy their Demands upon Messieurs Hugues, Bankers who pay'd the said Army the last Campaign, and on whose Credit they advanc'd the said 3 Millions. They were before offer'd to be repay'd in Assignments on the Subsidies given by the States of Languedoc and by the States of Britany, and about one third in Mint-bills; but they absolutely refus'd the last: I cannot yet learn how M. Chamillard settled this Matter with them Yesterday. The Court are resolv'd to send an Army into Piemont at the opening of the Campaign, (for the Count de Medavi undertakes to maintain himself in the Mantuan this Winter, provided he be reliev'd by a powerful Diversion in the Spring,) but the General Officers of the Army who are return'd hither, whisper among their particular Friends, that 'twill be impossible. However all the Preparations for it are going to be made this Winter; and a Draper of this City has engag'd to furnish the Cloathing for the Recruits rais'd for that Army. The Count de Bergeick, the Elector of Bavaria's chief Minister, arriv'd here last Week (with the Answer of England and Holland to the general Proposal of Peace made in October on the part of our King by the Elector of Bavaria,) and immediately went to M. Chamillard, with whom he has since spent 2 Days in close Conference. 'Tis said he is a Man of great Abilities, and that he has a great share in the Management of Affairs in Flanders.

Paris, Dec. 6. The Count de Pontchartrain is gone to Toulon with a great Sum of Money, to hasten the fitting out of several Ships of War there. 'Tis said General Toralba has sent the King an Account, that he had disarm'd the Townsmen of Cremons, because he had discover'd that they were inclin'd to favour the Imperialists.
